

Your SMSF should do more than just perform...

It should thrive.

Self managed super funds can be difficult to navigate, but they don't have to be with the help of an SMSF Specialist.

Running a self managed super fund (SMSF) can be complicated enough but add in current world events like the pandemic and global instability, and you have a whole new level of uncertainty and complexity. But within every challenge are great opportunities.

Take control of your self managed super with an SMSF Specialist by your side

One of the greatest advantages of having your own SMSF is its flexibility. You can invest in new opportunities and adjust your asset allocations as and when you want. However seeing the opportunities and having the right SMSF strategy is the most difficult task, especially at a time when local markets and global economies seem fragile.

This is why capitalising on the expertise of a highly trained and independently accredited SMSF Specialist is the smart move. They can assist you with the set up process, if needed, or evaluate and adjust your existing SMSF to ensure it takes advantage of emerging opportunities, guiding you through these complex and uncertain times.

Why choose an accredited SMSF Specialist?

Simple, because they are the best of the best. Whether you are a hands-on trustee and require ad hoc assistance, or you prefer full support every step of the way, accredited SMSF Specialists are the elite of their profession.

Look for the mark of SMSF excellence

The SMSF Association Specialist accreditation is a symbol of excellence and is proof of an individual's SMSF expertise.

Having been through the most rigorous accreditation process, SMSF Specialist Advisors are seen in the industry as the most trusted source of information and advice for anyone managing their own super.
