

CODE OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT & DISCIPLINARY PROCEDURES[©]

SMSF Association

September 2023

Overview

The SMSF Association is a self-regulating professional association whose members voluntarily agree to be bound by various professional, technical and ethical standards.

The standards embodied in this code aim to ensure that the self-managed superannuation fund (SMSF) advisory profession exercises the highest level of professionalism; providing a quality of service which achieves credibility among, and the confidence of Australian SMSF consumers, government, regulators and other stakeholders. The SMSF Association SMSF Specialist Advisor and SMSF Specialist Auditor are the consumers' professional of choice for SMSF advice and services.

Membership of the SMSF Association requires a professional to conduct himself/herself in a professional, business-like manner at all times. This Code of Professional Conduct and Disciplinary Procedures ('the Code') are the expected minimum requirement for all SMSF Association members. The Code is not meant to replace and/or amend any alternate professional standards, duties or obligations already held by SMSF Association members. Any additional standards, duties or obligations that may be held by SMSF Association members will instead complement those contained in the Code. Rather, the Code is to be read as a minimum acceptable professional standard as applicable to all SMSF Association members.

The Code is designed to ensure that any complaints and disciplinary processes are handled effectively, expeditiously, and in a manner that observes the principles of natural justice and procedural fairness.

The Code is to be read in conjunction with the Constitution of the SMSF Association, the Specialist Accreditation Program SMSF Specialist Auditor Rules and Conditions, the Specialist Accreditation Program SMSF Specialist Advisor Rules and Conditions and the SMSF Association SMSF Specialist Auditor Standards of Professional Conduct for SMSF Specialist Auditors and any other rules, conditions or obligations imposed by the SMSF Association from time to time.

5. Major Principles

The SMSF Association is committed to and requires Members to adhere to the following Membership eligibility criteria comprising these major principles:

Principle 1: Safeguard the Public Interest

Members must acknowledge and accept the responsibility to safeguard the interests of their clients provided that this does not conflict with the duties and loyalties owed to the community, its laws and regulatory and government institutions. If a Member is unable to comply with this principle due to law or regulation, the Member shall comply with all other sections of the Code.

Members must place the client's interests first which is the hallmark of professionalism; requiring Members to act honestly and not place the best interests of the client behind personal and/or employer gain or advantage, economic or otherwise.

Principle 2: Integrity

Members must at all times act with integrity and ensure that they are acting within the ambit of all relevant professional standards and conduct that is required by their respective professions and professional bodies to which they belong and must not breach public trust in the SMSF profession, the specific trust of their clients, Members and other relevant stakeholders.

The principle of integrity imposes an obligation on all Members to act in a manner that is honest, sincere and straightforward in all their professional and business interactions.

A Member shall not knowingly be associated with returns, reports, communications, information, advice and or actions where the Member is aware that such association is marred by materially false, misleading, reckless, obscure or omitted representations.

Principle 3: Objectivity and Independence

Members must be objective, impartial and free of conflicts of interest in the performance of their professional duties.

Regardless of the services rendered or the capacity in which the Member operates, objectivity requires that the Member ensures the impartiality and integrity of their work, manages conflict and exercises sound professional judgement.

In each professional assignment undertaken for a client, Members should be seen to be free of any interest which might be regarded, whatever its actual effect, as being incompatible with objectivity. Threats to objectivity may occur in various situations and forms, including, but not limited to, the following:

- A personal or economic interest of the Member, a family member, or a person of close relationship or acquaintance with the Member;
- The promotion of a specific opinion, service, product or supplier by a Member, due to personal or economic interest;
- Actual or perceived undue influence of a Member to promote a certain opinion, service, product or supplier.

Principle 4: Confidentiality

Members must respect the confidentiality of information acquired in the scope of their professional relationships and not disclose such information to third parties without authorised consent, unless there is a legal, statutory or professional duty to disclose such information.

The requirement of the principle of confidentiality continues after the relationship has terminated between the Member and the client.

Principle 5: Competence

Members must maintain the abilities, skills and knowledge necessary to provide competent professional services. Competence extends further to include the wisdom to recognise one's own limitations and whether consultation with other professionals or referral to other professionals would be appropriate or in fact necessary. Members must only accept such work as they believe they are competent to perform. Members are encouraged to obtain expert advice from appropriately qualified parties where the Member does not have the necessary competency or skill to adequately discharge their professional duties.

Where possible and or appropriate, a Member shall make clients, or any other relevant parties, aware of limitations inherent in the services that are provided.

Principle 6: Knowledge

Competence requires that Members make a continuing commitment to learning and professional improvement and that they keep abreast of current developments in legislation, practices and standards and exercise due diligence in the discharge of their duties in accordance with applicable technical and professional standards. In this regard, Members must adhere to the SMSF Association CPD Policy applicable to his or her Membership category.

Principle 7: Ethical Behaviour

Members must refrain from conduct or actions that may tarnish the image of the SMSF sector, or unjustifiably detract from the good name of the SMSF Association, or its Membership in the community.

Members are required to behave with dignity, showing respect and courtesy to clients, fellow Members and other stakeholders in all business-related activities, and complying with appropriate rules, regulations and professional standards.

It is imperative that Members endeavour to at all times maintain professional standards that improve and enhance the image of the SMSF Association and the SMSF sector. The Code also includes professional standards which are mandatory for Members.
